

Feeling pressured to make a second year housing decision?

Campus Area Housing Myth # 2: I have to decide now where I'm going to live next year because if I don't sign a lease right away everything will be full or the 'good stuff' will be gone!

Truth: There may have been a shortage of student housing at one time.... But with the addition of several large buildings in close proximity to campus, it's simply not the case anymore.

Unless you have a large group of people seeking a place together, or you already have a specific place in mind...

We recommend you give yourself until after Winter Break to make a decision.

Plus... That little bit will give you ample time to really get to know √ Residence Hall living.....

√ The opportunity to determine your interest in staying a second year,

√ The people you might want to live with.

If you decide that living in one of the neighboring campus communities would suit you best, after break is the time to find the greatest availability and selection anyway!

The decision is as individual as you are – but make it thoughtfully & carefully.

Here's what some students have said about making this important choice:

"It's a personal decision. Consider your independence level, interest in housing programming, & leadership opportunities. Start thinking early, but be patient and sure of your decision." -Christie

"Take your time in regards to with whom you want to live and where." -Jake

"Don't let other people signing leases force you into a rushed decision." -Kayla

For more information and other resources about renting in the campus area:

Campus Area Housing

A service of:

VISITOR & INFORMATION
PROGRAMS
University of Wisconsin-Madison

Featuring a consolidated web-based resource for campus area vacancies –
Instead of searching multiple websites - search the one that has them all!

wisc.edu keyword search: campus area housing